Post-operative surgical care specialists celebrate one year of operation
Highbury Surgical Recovery offers complete care packages to promote recovery

Vancouver - August 17, 2008 – Highbury Surgical Recovery is celebrating the end of its first year of operation with the relaunch of its web site, www.highburyrecovery.com. Included on the new site are tips for patients recovering from surgery, details of services available, and rates, as well as downloadable forms for patients, including an extended health care benefits form that, when completed by surgeons, may authorize fee coverage.

“More surgeries as a result of technological breakthroughs and a population that is both aging and growing has led to shorter and shorter hospital stays,” said Christine Molnar, RN, Highbury’s CEO. “Combine this with increasing numbers of elective surgeries and you have a growing need for post-operative care. Highbury helps patients recover from surgeries of any kind.”

Highbury’s services include a pre-operative assessment, transportation from hospital or surgical centre to patients’ homes or hotel rooms, and consultation with surgeons, as well as vital sign monitoring. Mobile spa treatments are also available on request.

“While there are many companies now offering ongoing palliative or convalescent care,” said Christine Molnar, “as a critical care nurse with more than 20 years experience I realized there was an increasing need for shorter-term post-surgical care that can only be provided by registered nurses with the skills, training and experience to make critical assessments and act quickly to prevent complications.”

Patients can elect either by-the-hour or custom-designed complete post-surgical care packages to reduce the stress of recovery and minimize the risk of post-surgical complications.
